Getty Images was founded in 1995, their aim was to bring fragmented stock photography into the digital age. And that is exactly what they did! Getty Images have continued to drive the industry forward with breakthrough licensing models, digital media management tools and a comprehensive offering of creative and editorial imagery, micro-stock, footage, and music.

We are proud to have had Getty Images as our client since 2012. We provide 24/7 security provisions at their prestigious head office building in central London. Our main responsibilities are:

- Security provision
- Reception services, including lunch break cover
- Monitoring CCTV
- Internal/external patrols using our Active Guard patrolling technology

We have a strong relationship with our high-profile client, it is a pleasure to work with them and a great environment for our security officers to work in. We have a mutual expectation on impeccably high standards, culturally our relationship with Getty is a perfect match.

Client testimony

Hear directly from our client, Jeremy McReddie, Facilities Supervisor, Getty Images UK Ltd about his experience with Adsec Group.

"When we changed from our long-standing security provider to Adsec Group, the change was remarkable. We have benefited from increased quality in the standard of the site guards, and an increased quality of the account management & importantly, consistently met SLA's & KPI's."

We have not had any issues with their accounts department & reconciliation of invoices which was not the case with our previous security provider - saving us time & effort!

At commencement, Adsec set about addressing the issues we had by undertaking an assessment of the skill set of staff provided in each role to the Getty London sites. From the results, we drew up individual training plans to expand and develop the abilities needed to provide a first-class service. Any staff that were unable to meet the proficient aptitude desired, were reallocated to more suitable sites, equal to their skills."
